WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, VT – Resource Systems Group, Inc. (RSG) is expanding onto the Eastern seaboard with the opening of a new office in Arlington, Virginia. This office will support RSG's increased activity with clients in the Capitol region.

The Arlington office will be managed by William Woodford, who joins RSG as Principal in Transit Forecasting. He brings twenty-five years of extensive consulting and leadership experience in the areas of travel demand forecasting, ridership forecasting, and transportation planning. He has focused his career on the planning and development of fixed guideway transit New Starts projects with a particular emphasis on transit ridership forecasting, alternatives analysis and system analysis.

"We've worked with Bill on numerous projects spanning two decades and all of those projects benefited significantly from his hands-on involvement and insights. We are delighted that he will bring his extensive experience with transit ridership forecasting to RSG," said Thomas Adler, President of RSG.

"We're very excited that Bill decided to join the RSG family. The opening of our Arlington office is a perfect opportunity to bring him onboard," commented Clayton Adams, CEO of RSG. "The proximity to Federal and regional clients will enable us to deliver another facet to our engagements and build stronger relationships with our partners in the area. We're looking forward to joining the community and being a good corporate neighbor."

Before joining RSG, Mr. Woodford was a vice-president with AECOM, consulting with many of the larger U.S. transit agencies including New York, Newark, Washington, Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles and San Jose.
